

Food is Rationed Where Germany Rules

Where the German army goes, the ration card is sure to follow.

Not are restrictions on food consumption confined to countries normally dependent on seaborne imports of essential foods. The German conception of fair treatment of conquered nations follows broadly speaking, the following lines: no country however rich in agricultural resources deserves a higher standard of living than the standard of Germany; countries which cannot, out of their own resources, supply their populations with food allowances equivalent to the German rations, have to live on less, and only in countries where the available supplies are not sufficient to cover bare necessities of life is some relief granted out of the German food pool. Yet butter has been rationed in Denmark on the basis of 12.5 ounces per head per week.

In Norway, the wholesale price of salted herrings has risen 30 per cent. There is already a dearth—due to continued German demands for increased fish deliveries.

In Holland, which normally exports its egg surplus to the larders of both Great Britain and Germany, eggs are rationed at one egg per person per week.

Food control in France increases in severity. In Paris, potatoes are rationed at two pounds per week.

A few incidents as reported in the Continental press:

A German soldier killed a Norwegian sailor with his bayonet at Molde when the sailor made remarks against him when he was with a Norwegian girl in the town park. The German soldier was not punished. Three thousand people many of whom had come from afar, attended the funeral—Nations, Oslo.

A Dutchman threw a beer glass at a German soldier in a cafe, seriously injuring him. He was sentenced to 3 years imprisonment. Three young Dutchmen, under the impulse of enmity to the German forces, took the caps of German officers from a restaurant cloakroom and tore them to pieces. They were sentenced to 17 months imprisonment. The German court stated: "Certainly a mild sentence for this great insult."

NEW BRITISH STEEL

Gives More Than Double Normal Shock Resistance

A new shock-resisting steel has been produced in England after two years intensive research.

Some years ago the makers introduced a metal combining the strength of high tensile steel with the ductility of mild steel. It was used for many purposes, notably for 8,000 railway wheel centres for London's tube trains and for ship's davits.

But whereas it permitted davits to be loaded up to 25 per cent greater than before new davits made from new steel for special duties have recently been passed for a further increase of up to 15 per cent loading for the same frame size.

In addition to the properties of the other, the new steel has a yield point of 60 per cent, or more, of the ultimate tensile strength and a resistance to shock of not less than 30 ft. lb.—two to three times the normal figure for carbon steel casting of the same tensile strength. Uses to which this new shock-resisting steel has so far been put include excavator castings and automatic couplers for railway rolling stock.

MANNEQUINS GO TO THE PALACE

Queen Shares With Them Secrets Of New Models

Nine mannequins went to Buckingham Palace to show the Queen a selection from the London Fashion Collection which they are taking over to South America to display in April.

The models are a secret until Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro see them on St. George's Day. Meanwhile, Paquin's designer, Mme. Mosca, discloses that four out of nine of theirs will be in cotton.

"I am using some exciting and beautiful designs," she says. "For eighteen years while I was in Paris I never failed to import British materials. Nobody can compete with the best of British fabrics. France has never had silks like English tie silks for blouses and dresses. Then there are the English laces, as fine as the finest patterns on a window."

Paquin, and the other eight dress designers who are creating the London Fashion collection, are also using many lovely wools: Mme. Mosca has even gone to the cottages of Wales to see the women producing them from their kitchen looms.

"They make their own dyes from the leaves of the bilberry—blueberries, and the like—and they dry their fabrics in the open air. I know no people who put their colours together with greater artistry than the Welsh. It is most remarkable how, for example, they will instinctively choose the right yellow and the right pink, and that is not an easy combination, though a very smart one, even for the most experienced dress designer."

CANADA EXPECTS BIG TOURIST YEAR

Montreal—Canada is anticipating the best season in the Dominion's tourist history based on inquiries received at principal Canadian National offices in the United States. Americans are more than ever "Canadaminded," travel experts say, and Canada should be host to more Americans than ever before. Already there have been heavy advance bookings at Canada's outstanding resorts in Jasper National Park in the Canadian Rockies, Muskoka in the Lake-of-the-Woods and Pictou in Nova Scotia.

Make your dollars talk now. Spiffers will deliver your message.

O.S.A. EXPERIMENTAL UNION

The Old School of Agriculture Experimental Union again has available for distribution some excellent seeds and plants of field and garden crops. These are listed below. Each member may make five selections.

Anyone interested may become a member of the experimental union by paying an annual membership fee of $1.00. Members of the O.S.A. alumni association may make selections without fee.

1. Potatoes (25 eyes) Vicks Early.
2. Potatoes (20 eyes) Bovee.
3. Potatoes (25 eyes) Kathadin (late).
4. Red Wing Flax, 2 lbs.
5. Bromo Grass, Parkland, 1 lb.
6. Timothy, Swallow, 1 lb.
7. Creeping Red Fescue, 1/4 lb.
8. Jerusalem Artichoke tubers, 1 lb.
9. Alberta Brown Beans, 1/2 lb.
10. Caragan seedlings, 100.
11. Garden Peas, 3 varieties.
12. Garden Beans, 3 varieties.
13. Perennial flower roots, 5 (dwarf to medium).
14. Perennial flower roots, 5 (medium to tall).
15. Lilacs, 3.
16. Aconitum (Monkshood), perennial, 3 varieties.
17. Climbing vines, 2.
18. Rhubarb roots, 2.
19. Raspberry, Raspberries, 12.
20. Native Plum seeds, 12.
21. Butternut seeds, 4.

Supply of some of this material is quite limited so some substitutions may be necessary.

Also limited amounts of seed of a number of the leading varieties of wheat, oats, barley and peas but nothing strikingly new. Members who are interested are asked to write. Orders will not be accepted after April 15th.

Membership fee of $1.00 which includes shipping charges must accompany selections. When not shipped—65 cents.

Report forms must be filled in and returned to the O.S.A. at the end of the growing season.

LIFE INSURANCE

Every paper you read records a lawsuit arising from a car accident, besides there are hundreds you never hear about that are settled out of court. If we had to pay $10,000.00 or $20,000.00 to someone, we would wish we had spent a few dollars and carried insurance. A person who drives a car without insurance is dancing on the edge of trouble. World of Wheat

H. G. L. Strang, Director, Research Department, Saskatchewan Grain Company, Ltd.

Comparative yields of the recommended standard varieties of wheat from the 1939 and 1940 "Crop Testing-Plan" and official governmental tests have recently become available. They show most interesting results. One surprising thing is to find how Regent, the latest product of the Dominion Rust Research Laboratory, has won up to the top class.

Throughout the west, on the average, for the two years in question, Regent yielded slightly more than any other variety closely followed, however, by Thatcher, Renown and Apex, and out of the rust area in Saskatchewan by Marquis. In Alberta Regent was close on the heels of the high yielding varieties, Marquis, Red Bobs and Thatcher.

This must all be a source of considerable gratification to the plant breeders and other workers of the Dominion Rust Research Laboratory who produced Regent. We are informed further that the varieties, Regent, Renown, Apex and Thatcher, will be still further improved year by year as newer Registered strains become available.

There are, of course, differences in yields of the various varieties in different districts. To find the variety best suited for himself each farmer, therefore, should make a test of several varieties on his own farm. In general, however, it can be said that any one of the varieties mentioned will give satisfaction for the districts in which they are recommended by the proper authorities.

Following factors have tended to raise prices: Stocks of wheat in Tokyo have been reported below normal. Severe dust storms have been reported since March 1st in Texas. Crop reports from Europe continue to indicate below normal prospects for winter grains. Britain has lifted the blockade against food shipments to Spain.

Following factors have tended to lower prices: The Argentine corn surplus on February 28th was estimated at 223 millions versus only 15 million a year ago. India's wheat crops have been making satisfactory progress. Private reporters estimate U.S. winter wheat at 610 million bushels. Turkey's 1940 crop estimates above normal.

GARDEN SERVICE

(By Gordon Lindsay Smith)

Once again war is bringing to Canadians the vital value of vegetables. So important are these in the average diet that besieged Great Britain is now stressing home-grown fresh vegetables above almost any other food. They are essential in any diet, and when properly grown are the most flavorful of our foods, as well. The secret of high-quality vegetables, the kind that will take most of us back to the supper delights of our childhood, is quick, unchecked growth, and freshness.

If we can keep carrots, beets, beans and such things growing quickly and steadily, then there is no chance for woe to develop. Having done this the only other thing necessary is to make sure that no time is lost in picking and the table. Garden peas and corn, for example, fresh picked, have a flavor that is impossible to get when these vegetables are picked one day and used the next.

Most for the Money
 For sheer volume per square yard of soil employed, vegetables are the biggest yielding crop one can grow. Not only can most lines be grown close together but with some things, like carrots and lettuce, for instance, a second crop can be harvested in a single season.

Small vegetables like lettuce and radish require rows 15 inches apart. Beets, beans, peas, and spinach need 18 inches between, while potatoes, corn and stalked tomatoes must have a couple of feet to thirty inches. Space may be saved with the latter type if something quick maturing such as lettuce and spinach are planted in between. The bigger things

Oat Chop Sifter

Home made oat chop sifter for removing hulls from oat chop. All young pigs should be fed sifted oat chop until three months of age. Plans of the sifter may be obtained from the Extension Service, Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR OPERATION AND USE

The following instructions have been prepared by Mr. P. Wylie, Acting Sheep and Swine Promoter, Live Stock Branch, Department of Agriculture, who designed the sifter, through the courtesy of Mr. W. Wylie of Warburg.

Plans—The accompanying plans give complete measurements for building the oat chop sifter. Many variations of the machine could be made, but if the principle of running the oat chop through the cylinder made of screen is observed, good results should be obtained.

Material—There will be little material to buy. The frame may be made of spare lengths of wood and the shaft from a broom stick or other round wood about 1 inch in diameter. Ordinary window screen is required, measuring 4x36 inches. This allows for a cylinder 16 inches in diameter, 24 1/2 inches x 48 inches, and after the hopper in cut out the pieces remaining may be used to make the auger. (See plans.)

Operation—It is suggested that the machine be set up near the chop bin and sufficient chop sifted at one time to last a few weeks. The sifted chop may be placed in bags or a separate bin and the hulls can be fed to horses or cattle.

The proper speed to turn the cylinder can be determined by the operator. The sifted chop should be inspected from time to time and if too many hulls are coming through, the hopper end of the machine may be raised so that the chop will flow along faster.

Why Sift Oat Chop?

1. The digestive system of the pig, especially a young pig, is simple and not made to handle bulky feed. If too much bulk (hulls) is present the hog cannot eat enough to grow normally.
 2. The intestines of young pigs are very delicate and the lining easily becomes inflamed through the feeding of coarse feed (oat hulls). Under such conditions germ infection may set in and a serious case of inflammation of the intestines will develop. In many cases this will cause death, but if it does not, the growth of the pig is retarded.

3. Oats contain about 30 per cent of hulls. These have no feeding value and should be removed. In fact the grain ration for growing pigs should not contain more than about 5 per cent of hulls.

4. Young pigs make faster gains on sifted oat chop and they are not liable to develop digestive disorders.
 5. Remember sifting oat chop does not waste any of it. The hulls and coarse particles of chop may be fed to cattle or horses whose stomachs can handle bulky feed.

Use sifted oat chop for growing pigs until 3 to 3 1/2 months of age. The following ration is recommended for young pigs:

Sifted oat chop—200 lbs.
 Ground barley—100 lbs.
 Ground wheat—100 lbs.
 Skim milk, buttermilk or a protein supplement should also be added.

LOSSES IN SEEDING GRASSES AND CLOVERS

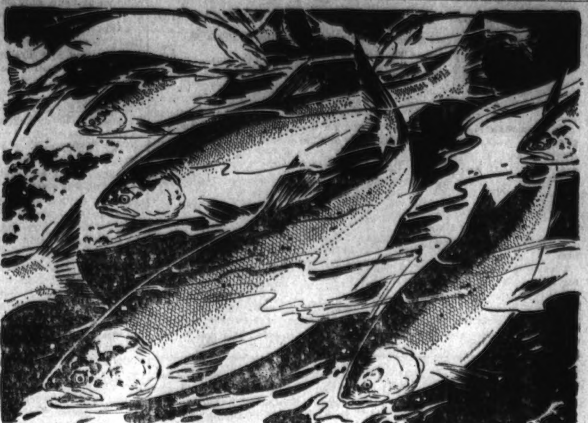

(Experimental Farm News)

The results of experiments conducted by the Field Husbandry Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, show that there is considerable loss of seed when grasses and clovers are sown by commonly used methods, says P. O. Ripley, of the Division. Various seed mixtures were sown at the Farm in Ottawa in 1939 and 1940 with an ordinary grain-drill which dropped the grass seed broadcast on top of or immediately behind the discs. The land was not harrowed after seeding but the seed was covered by standard chains attached behind the discs. Counts were made of the number of seeds which had germinated after seeding and again one month later. There was only a slight difference in the number of seedlings at the two periods.

 When the seed mixture was made up of 10 pounds of red clover, 2 lbs. of alfalfa, 6 pounds of timothy and 6 pounds of timothy only 30 per cent of the seed sown had germinated and produced seedlings 2 months after seeding. With a mixture of 5 pounds of red clover, 2 pounds of alfalfa, 10 pounds of alfalfa and three pounds of timothy, approximately 38 per cent of the seed had germinated. Where 8 pounds of red clover, 2 pounds of alfalfa and 6 pounds of timothy were seeded 26 per cent of the seeds germinated. None of the mixtures sown showed a germination higher than 38 per cent two months after seeding. While this amount was sufficient to produce a good stand of almost 3 1/2 tons of hay per acre there was, nevertheless, a loss of 62 per cent of the seed sown, although a previous laboratory test showed that the seed in all cases germinated over one-half inch deep.

Other experiments conducted recently have shown that the seed of red clover, alfalfa, timothy and alfalfa will produce the best stands, when sown 1/4 to 1/2 inches deep. With many of the common methods of seeding much of the seed is covered more deeply. Experiments have disclosed the need of care to see that the seed spouts deliver the seed behind the discs and are covered not more than one-half inch deep.

Canadian waters are not only a prolific source of good food for our tables, but contribute in important measure to our export trade. It takes a great army of workers—fishermen, canning hands, executives—to catch and market the "silver horde." No sporting pastime is this, but toil and business of great importance to the nation.

The Bank of Montreal co-operates with the FISHERIES industries by furnishing the specialized types of banking services they need. It is the banking home of thousands of hardy fishermen who have savings or checking accounts.

It Takes One T 'or to Make a House

IT TAKES nine tailors to make a man—so goes the lyric from "Robin Hood"—but only one architect to design a house.

At least, that was the number used on this one. Randolph Evans, widely known for his many ingenious small homes designs, planned it for an All-American family of four. Neither boy nor rambling, it has many of the economies peculiar to the former, plus the expansive grace of the latter.

Its economies are due principally to its simple, rectangular plan, the elimination of a large space-consuming stair hall, and a compact arrangement of rooms. Its outside appeal is due mostly to a playful use of roofs and dormers. Part of its green-blue asphalt shingled roof dips down over the front door, permitting a full dormer above, while another part is sharply cut off several feet higher. The garage roof finds still another set of eaves. This break and dip of roof areas offsets the comparative simplicity of plan; makes the colorful, fire-resistant roof the focal point of the entire house.

And note the light-flooded garage, a welcome change from the usual dark, depressing car shelter. Two panels of insulux glass blocks provide it with workable light.

The same lightful glass blocks have also been used in the living room, to form two panels flanking the front end window. These help screen the room from the street, for though they admit light, they obscure vision.

Of course, lots of closets is an old story now—everybody appreciates how important they are. But this house has even more than usual, without overdoing a very good idea. For instance, two closets opening off the entry hall provide space for outer clothes and games. One of these has two "peek" windows set in the outer wall; these fill it with insulux, translucent daylight—a big help in an otherwise dark closet.

The exterior walls of the house are of wood, painted light pearl gray. A contrast of clapboard with smooth siding (used above the front door) adds to its horizontality; helps emphasize the entry. The roof is of blue-green asphalt shingles, long-lived and economical. Less than forty feet wide, it will fit easily on a fifty foot lot, says Mr. Evans, who designed it for the Monthly Small House Club, 149 N. 14th Street, New York. It should cost about $8,000 to build in most part of the country.

WAINWRIGHT, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 19th, 1941

DON'T LET HIM DOWN!

He's just a lad as years go, and this mad, grief-stricken world that has forgotten how to "play the game" forgotten how to "play the game". We took him from schools, shops, farms, factories and offices. He laid down his fishing rod and tennis racket and skis, and donned a uniform and shouldered a rifle... without a murmur, without a complaint.

He did these things willingly, proudly, because he knows that he and his pals, and older friends, have a mighty important job on their hands right now.

He knows the meaning of war and sacrifice—heaven knows that's been drilled into our children since the last show—but he also knows the meaning of Nazi hostility and slavery. And he's determined that it will never overcome England, will never find its way to this side of the Atlantic to destroy the freedom and security of those near and dear to him... and the Canada he loves.

This boy is somebody's son, somebody's brother. He could be yours—This lad, this youth of high ideals and principles, is our hope of the future. We rely on him—and thousands of others like him—to carry on where we leave off. And we—his folks—will all the high role of leadership in the new and happier world of nations that is to follow.

His King, his Empire, is proud of his brave and unselfish response in this hour of need. And we—his folks—back home to whom he has waved a "cheerio" and "thumbs up"—are we proud of him? Words, more words, cannot answer that.

Today, we who hold the home front are being challenged—challenged by a conscience that will not let us be. For today we have the one and only opportunity that will come within gaining of the year, that parents would, in future, be able to have their children at home only on the second and fourth Sundays of the month.

Later, when the children are in their teens, they enter the Labour Service, and are drafted to Labor Camps. From there, the boys enter the Army and girls are expected to marry.

That is the indictment which Mrs. Adamson levels against the Nazis—and every word of it can be proved by the publications of Nazis themselves. Over and over again, Hitler has declared his imperishable, devoted love for the welfare of Germany's children; he has shouted from the house-tops his eagerness to see them grow "in tender care and shelter" to the fullest citizenship.

Yet what do the medical records of Germany tell of Germany's children? Do they reflect this tender care and devotion? Do they give evidence that the Nazis are concerned with the rearing of a nation of citizens, or of merely a nation of robot soldiers?

Berlin's official figures tell their own grim story. Between 1933 and 1937, the number of children's diseases in Germany trebled.

In the succeeding years, the incidence rose, because the German nutrition drive was concentrated on the Army. In Munich, only 3-1/3 per cent of the city's children were free of rickets in 1939. Disease of the eyes were on the increase. Allments due to malnutrition were growing more common daily.

This is the glorious hope of freedom and health that Germany offers her women and children. This is what happens in a Reich where everything is subordinated to the development of a great army of destruction.

And this is what British women are determined shall never happen in a free and proud British Empire.

DOMINION TO CONTINUE THE 70 CENT INITIAL PAYMENT

The Dominion Government will continue the initial payment of 70 cents a bushel on wheat in 1941-42, Trade Minister J. A. MacKinnon announced in the Commons today.

A limit of 230,000,000 bushels has been set on the amount of wheat to be delivered to the Canadian Wheat Board on the open market or otherwise and it is hoped this amount can be sold in domestic and export markets.

The quota system of delivery at elevators will be continued and these quotas will be based on the production from 65 per cent of the 1940 acreage.

"The first quota will be a general one and will allow the delivery of the same amount of wheat per acre from every farmer," said Mr. MacKinnon. "The second and following quotas will be certain proportions of the 1941 yield for the farmer's shipping point; that is, a high yield in 1941 will have a higher quota per acre than a low yield point."

In order to induce farmers to reduce wheat acreage the government will pay them for wheat lands turned into summerfallow, sown to coarse grains and rye or seeded to grass or clover, Agricultural Minister Gardiner announced.

For reduced wheat acreage summerfallow and "in the black" on July 1, the government will pay farmers $4 per acre. For reduced wheat acreage sown to coarse grains, rye, grass or clover, the payment will be $2 per acre.

Features at the Elite

"GRAPES OF WRATH"

The story starts in the picture where it starts in the book, with Tom Joad returning from prison to the Oklahoma farm. The family possessions and personnel are placed aboard a jalopy and the journey to California follows. The grandfathers dies and is buried by the roadside. The grandmothers dies atop the lumbering vehicle and is smothered, dead, past the California border. The hand-bill promising work and good wages is proved a liar, and poverty breaks down the family unit, brings despair, desperation, finally crime, flight and, stopping short of the book, winds up with only "Ma Joad" brave and courageous enough to speak the final keynote line, "We are the people." See this picture at your local theatre this Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

OUR NEIGHBORS THE CARTERS

Charles R. Rogers' second contribution to the Paramount program offers another anti town American family confronted with troubles of various kinds but triumphant and happy in the end.

The story is about an old-fashioned druggist whose loss of a boy brings him to the edge of ruin, at which point well intentioned wealthy friends seek to give him a trust fund in exchange for one of his children.

This feature shows next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Elite Theatre.

And Here's to the Ladies!

All the buying of War Savings Certificates is not being done by the Men. Not a bit of it. The ladies are doing their full share, and this on top of their Red Cross work, and other War Activities — God bless them!

We offer our warm congratulations to the ladies of Alberta for the inspiration and example of their efforts. Before the War Savings Drive is over, we firmly believe that there won't be a home in this province that is not pledged 100 per cent to Buy War Savings Certificates.

We are proud to pay this tribute to Albertans who are working so faithfully and so conscientiously to insure the success of the War Savings Certificates Drive.

EDGERTON

There is every reason for us all to be very proud of our local creamery, or rather those in charge, for we understand that at a recent Dairyman's Convention held at Edmonton this branch stood in second place for the entire Province. Considering the size of our Village, we think it is quite an honor. Thanks and hearty congratulations to you Mr. Eckhardt and your efficient staff. The Edmonton creamery won the trophy which is awarded annually by the Department of Agriculture.

Clifford Challenger left Wednesday last for Edmonton, where he took his final medical exams for the R.C.A.F. We have since learned that he has been accepted, and is already hard at work at the Brandon air training camp.

Miss Lucille House of the Bank of Montreal staff, commenced her annual vacation Saturday last. It is understood that she plans to spend part of the time in Edmonton.

Messrs. G. C. Walsh, T. L. Shaw and F. F. Mitchell braved treacherous roads last Thursday, and journeyed to Wainwright to attend a special session of the Masonic Lodge.

Mrs. J. A. Barr, who is directing the forthcoming W.A. play, was on the sick list last week, and was unable to attend practice on Thursday. It is to be hoped that this is not the beginning of another jinx.

We regret to report the serious illness of Robert Watson, Sr. Dr. Wallace of a Wainwright was called on Saturday and he diagnosed the malady as a stroke, and a very severe one. Latest news of the patient indicated little change.

Owing to the blizzard which raged all Saturday morning, the Silver Tea and Home-cooking sale, which was to have been held at the H. A. Kelly home that afternoon, had to be postponed. Watch for the new date.

It is a great pity that weather and road conditions prevented a great many people from attending the showing of "The World in Flames," last Friday and Saturday. Complied mainly from newspaper photos taken from men literally under fire themselves, it was a vivid portrayal of the utter ruthlessness of Dictatorship. The pitiful plight of humans, and the wide-spread destruction that we read and hear of daily—then, in instances, promptly forgot—were really brought home to those of us who saw it. If we have any feelings of compassion for their sufferings over there, or a sense of gratitude for our safety, the very least which we can do, is dig down still deeper in our pockets, and buy more and more War Savings Stamps and Certificates, to prove that we are not a collection of ingrates.

Since scribbling the above, we have heard, more than once, the history-making speech of President Roosevelt on Saturday night. We have always admired him and his high ideals, and now we think he is comparable to our own great leader, Winston Churchill. What comfort his magnificent promises must have brought to the war-weary people of the British Isles, and most significant of all, promises that will be kept. Never have we doubted how the conflict would end, but now we are quite hopeful that it will be soon, thanks to good old Franklin D. God bless him. Let us not fail these leaders and our own troops.

Let me put the SURE into Insurance for you. Have one of the strong companies I represent carry your risks in any line. Joe Welch.

GREENSHIELDS

The Go-Gotters Club met at the hall on Wednesday evening and enjoyed a program of games and sports. Mrs. Arley Hughes and Mr. Archie McDougall played for a few dances before lunch was served.

Quite a number of the young folk met the midnight train last Wednesday for a word with Doug Jackson as he went east for active service with the R.C.A.F.

During the past week, Mr. Chas. Morissette has been very ill and on Thursday was taken to the Wainwright Hospital for treatment. He has nicely improved now.

Mr. Ed. Patterson was a visitor in Edmonton a day or two this week.

The Ladies' Aid met at the Morrison home on Thursday afternoon. There was a good attendance and Mrs. Reid and Mrs. W. Jackson provided the entertainment, while Mrs. Morrison and Mrs. White served lunch.

Mrs. M. McDougall returned from Edmonton with Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Sinclair on Monday and will be visiting with the Morrises for the next few weeks.

Mrs. Glenn Valieu spent a few days with her parents last week.

Sheepskin Flats

(Too late for last week's issue)

Mr. Lee Traynor visited over the week end with Mr. G. Neakas.

A dance will be held in the school house on Friday the 21st.

Mr. J. Stranahan visited on Sunday with Mr. B. Roberts.

We are sorry to hear Mrs. Marvin Plaxton is on the sick list and wish her a speedy recovery.

AUBURNDALE

Exceptionally fine acting was shown by the players when the Autumn Leaf Amateur Dramatic Club staged the play "For Pete's Sake," on the evening of March 7th at the Autumn Leaf community hall.

Miss Muriel Green made a charming and natural society matron as Mrs. Clarkston, and as her two daughters, Nadine and Peggy, the Misses Bernice and Agnes Fraser debutantes; and Hector Lawrence as the Dean of the Boys' College played the part quite naturally of a learned and dignified college professor, even to the part of the elfin elusiveness that all great and learned men are supposed to possess in a more or less degree when the "dear Dean" slyly "sympathized with Mary-Ann, the maid, the part of Mary-Ann being played by Grant Hetherington, who, as Muggsy, a model student, and disguised as Mary-Ann, made it not exactly a pretty maid, even with a wig of very red hair, "she" at any rate was tall, well-built and serviceable looking. Miss Yelda Arthur as Aunt Sarah Pepperdine, the strong-minded, athletic, though slightly overweight spinster, descendant of the old and honored line of Pepperdines, played the part admirably, ruling the ancestral home of the Pepperdines and its inmates with a rod of iron, much of the discomfiture of her nephew, Peter Pepperdine (played by John Taylor) who, his aunt wished to become thoroughly versed in Latin, a language that Peter said was "defunct" and that he loathed. Miss Isabel Cleland, as Jasmine, the colored cook, made a quite lovable and superstitious negro mammy with feather pillows inserted back and front to give her "form." Arthur Caron, as Bill Bradshaw, Peter's pal, disguised as the gardener with a luxurious crop of false whiskers, might indeed have passed for a well-to-do Bohemian. Frank Eyben as Mr. Boliver, a rich, idle lounge lizard, and Harold Cleland as Mr. Dupont Darby, a rich parlour pet and bad poet got the cold shoulders they deserved from the lovely young Misses Clarkson in favor of Peter Pepperdine and Bill Bradshaw. The part of Miss Potts, the mannish-attired and sleuth-like lady reporter who shared a mutual love and jealousy with Muggsy was played by Miss Marguerite Caron. Mr. James Irving acted as Master of Ceremonies.

About 250 people attended the play, refreshments were served and a dance was held afterwards. The proceeds will be used to improve the Young People's Sporting Leagues and other worthy activities.

After the play a letter to the Secretary of State at Ottawa, was read from the stage by Mr. Guy Kent, and afterwards passed around for signatures—the letter having been drafted by Miss Dorothy Kent. About fifty leading citizens of the community added their signatures; and a copy of the letter will be sent to Mrs. Doris Neilson, Canada's only woman member of parliament. —Mrs. P. R.

What's the Word from Home?

Your rousing response to this united appeal will be the cheeriest word you can send him

Private John Smith is through with drill and duties for the day. He is tired, maybe a bit "fed up." He is far from home and lonely. He longs for a dash of gaiety, a bit of cheer; a year's, perhaps, for a homey nook where he can read, play games, listen to the radio, write to the folks back home. It is the job of these six organizations to see that discomfort, boredom, loneliness have no place in the precious leisure moments of our men in uniform. Whenever they go these services go too, come bomb or battle. In camp, on the march, on the ranges, these services bring them hot drinks and snacks, smokes and other comforts. Recreation centres are set up... sports and entertainment organized... reading and writing materials supplied. Comfortable canteens provide extra food. There are educational facilities. Hostess houses enable the men to enjoy healthy social contacts. Understanding, Experience and Dollars! Understanding hearts, organization and experience backed by your dollars can do the job effectively. Let the volunteer helper who calls on you carry back your pledge of fullest support for our fighting men. You never have failed them—you will not now.

CHAPTER XIV

"Three cheers for Miss Lucy!" said Mark. "Then what?"

"Mrs. Summerville told Miss Tredway to leave the house at once, sir. She said she'd been to all the parents of Miss Valerie's friends, and they had assured her they would not let their children associate with her, unless Miss Lucy left. I—"

"I see," said Mark. "I don't believe I want to hear any more. That's enough to go on with. After all, I might have known!" He stood staring at the fire. Chiltern had seen temper before, but never Mark's. He had gone white, as he stood there, his hands clenched at his sides.

"Thank you, sir," said Chiltern at last. "May I go now, sir?"

"Yes—no, wait. Have you anything to suggest? I mean about

"I'll send her over to Miss Endicott's. I wouldn't dare leave her here, she might have been sent to Siberia by the time we got back!"

Chiltern allowed himself to smile. "You might get Miss Endicott on the telephone for me. Then tell Mrs. Banwood we may be away for a few days. Give her whatever instructions you please. Then pack yourself a bag, and meet me here in an hour."

He got Shirley's number, and left the room. Shirley was in, luckily. Would she put Valerie up for a night or two? Mark asked. Valerie would explain. Loving Mark, being a tactful woman, and knowing human nature, she asked no questions, but said she'd adore having Valerie.

He put down the telephone and went upstairs.

"Chiltern and I are taking a run

"OF THESE THREE LOVES"

(By Louis Arthur Cunningham)

An exciting aerial romance by one of Canada's most popular fiction writers.

Tell your friends everywhere that one of the best Cunningham stories ever written is going to run in the Wainwright Star.

Every chapter of this delightful story is filled with excitement and emotional appeal. It's a good, clean, wholesome love story.

You'll be fascinated by this story of red-haired blue-eyed Gillian Meade and her three loves—It has all the romance you could ask for and even a touch of mystery.

Starting date: Week of March 26th.

He walked into the room and shut the door behind him.

"B—sit down—," she said, but she would not meet his eyes.

"We needn't bother with the amulet," he said. "I'm going away to try to undo some of the mischief you have done. I don't know how long it will take, but I want you to be out of my house by the time I get back. I should suggest leaving tomorrow morning. Chiltern will attend to whatever is necessary for your journey."

She turned on him with a show of outraged anger, which lost its effectiveness because she couldn't seem to lift her eyes to his.

"I never—," she began.

But he was already at the door.

"There is nothing more to be said—now or at any time," he repeated.

"Please leave here at your earliest convenience."

She started to call after him that she would leave at once. She had never been so insulted in her life. But she hesitated just long enough to remember the inconvenience of a hurried night departure. Besides if he was really going away, she would have time to question Valerie. She could always frighten the truth out of the little idiot.

She didn't know that Valerie was at that moment, bag in hand, telling Mark good-bye at the door of the big car, with Chiltern standing guard.

Mark watched the tail-lights disappear.

appear. Valerie was safe, and now he could think of Lucy. He went out of the front door into the warm comfort of his house. In spite of Lucy's going, he was strangely elated. He had at last let Dorothy know what he thought of her, without lament of cousins, maids, or conventionalities.

He ran up to his room, and threw an indiscriminate collection of clothes into a bag. When he had finished, he went out, deliberately locking first his own door, and then Valerie's. Mrs. Banwood had duplicate keys, and although he felt slightly ashamed, he put this down to pure habit. In his heart he knew he had no reason to trust Dorothy. He dropped the keys in his pocket, and ran downstairs.

Chiltern presently emerged from the room with Mark's heaviest coat, a hat, and fur-lined driving gloves. He held the coat for Mark, and shrugged himself into his own.

They stepped out into the clear cold of the night, and Chiltern closed the door behind them.

"Shall I drive, sir?" he asked as he opened the car door.

"Later, perhaps," Mark told him.

He swung through the gates and out into the road, heading for the state highway. There was practically no traffic, and Mark gave the long car its head.

Chiltern watched the needle swing steadily up to 70, where it stayed, and they settled down to a steady rush toward the night.

"What do you figure the Ark can do?" Mark asked.

"I couldn't say, sir. With the new engine she might make forty, shouldn't you say?"

"I never drove the old girl. I had the engine put in because Miss Lucy had a sort of affection for the thing. I'm sorry I did now."

"But a train would have made even better time," suggested Chiltern.

"I guess so. I don't suppose you have any idea when she left?"

"No, sir," said Chiltern. "You see, Mr. Alexander, the old bus never entered my head. I thought Miss Tredway would be taking the train, and kept waiting for her to call a taxi from the village. I kept watching near the front door, and all that time Chiltern says she was having him run the Ark out."

An hour later, when the flood light of a late moon showed only the empty expanse of a deserted highway, Mark spoke again.

"Do you happen to remember the time Mrs. Summerville went to talk to Miss Lucy?"

"It was about twelve."

"Then they didn't have lunch together?"

"Certainly not. Mrs. Summerville had a tray sent to her room. By that time, Miss Tredway must have gone."

"Could I do a bit of driving, sir?" Chiltern offered presently. "You must be wanting a nap."

"Not yet, thanks," replied Mark. Sleep was the last thing for him. He would, he told himself, go nuts if he had to sit and do nothing but think.

It was a few minutes before six when he caught sight of a lumbering shape drawn well off the road about twenty-five miles out of Allington. Tiny faint streaks of wintry dawn lay low on the horizon.

He freed a hand, and rubbed his eyes. He stopped his car about fifty yards behind the old van and shook Chiltern gently by the arm.

The man sat straight, his sober bowler hat a trifle rakishly over one eye, and regarded Mark remorsefully. "I slept, sir," he apologized.

"Oh—that's all right," whispered Mark excitedly, as if the dawn had ears. "Do you see what I see? A head of us?"

Chiltern peered out, and sleep immediately vanished. "That's it, sir," he cried. "There she is!" His excitement fully matched Mark's.

"Hold everything!" said Mark. He opened the door and jumped out, sprawling full length beside the car.

Chiltern leaped after him as he got gingerly to his feet. "Are you hurt, sir? What happened?" asked the man anxiously.

"The old knees folded up. I guess I'm not an all-night driver. Get in and wait. I'll be back."

Chiltern climbed back in the car, and Mark crept stealthily up to the Ark. The lines were unmistakable, even with its new coat of blue. Was the poor little idiot camping in the back, as she had done so long ago?

He would look in the front first. If she wasn't there, he would open up the back. He swung himself to the step, opened the door, and saw her. She was slumped over the wheel, the seat fur of her coat framing her small cold face.

The most terrible fear he had ever known gripped him. He slipped into the seat beside her and lifted her in his arms. Her head fell back against him and she opened her eyes. He was almost ill with relief.

She lay in his arms, and continued to look up at him. He could see sleep give way to a sort of daze, and at last to the reality of his presence. She started up, but he only gathered her more completely into his arms.

"What—" they cried at once.

Mark laughed. After all, what did it matter what they were asking each other?

"Lucy first," he said. "Not that I care. I know all about it, dear heart—I mean, why you left—why you have to come back—"

Lucy shook her head. "How?" she asked.

"Chiltern."

"What a man!" She smiled a wry little frozen smile. "I drove all night. I wanted to get to Allington as soon as I could. A little while ago, I got so sleepy I didn't dare go on. So I pulled up here. I thought I'd just shut my eyes a minute—"

"My poor little imbecile—you might have frozen. Somebody might have come along—"

"Somebody did," said Lucy.

The possibilities of her fate, did not trouble her now. Mark tucked a small strand of gold under Lucy's little hat and kissed her. She lay against his shoulder looking up at him. She felt that if he were never to say a word of love to her in all her life, she would know from his kiss.

"I suppose they have ministers at Allington?"

"Ministers?"

"They marry people, I can furnish all the rest—the bride, the groom, and even the best man."

"But—Mark—"

"I have Chiltern back there in the car. From now on, Chiltern is a national institution." He heard himself smiling rubbish, and didn't care. He knew now that he had never really held a girl in his arms until now.

Lucy laughed softly. Mark loved her. She knew it now. Of course there would never be another like him. She crowded closer in his arms.

"As soon as I've got you safely married," said Mark. "I'll send Chiltern home in the Ark. Valerie can stay on with Shirley for a bit. What is your choice in honeymoons?"

"What honeymoons have you?" asked Lucy. She wondered if they had just discovered happiness.

"Practically all brands," he assured her. "I never knew being in love was like this."

"I do!" said Lucy.

"He drew her onto his knee, and pulled the heavy blanket robe about them. She rested against him in faithless content."

Facts For Fish Lovers

By BETTY BARCLAY

This country may not be the "fisherman's paradise" that Finland is, with 80,000 lakes and 80,000 islands but there are few districts where fresh fish are not available — and excellent canned seafood is always in season. The many varieties of fish and shellfish make planning Lenten menus a pleasure. In fact Lent offers the homemaker a good opportunity to get better acquainted with this nutritious food which contributes valuable proteins and minerals to the diet.

Fish and lemons are associated on dining tables the world around. Lemon juice is rubbed over fish to be baked or fried; fresh fish is marinated in lemon juice and salt before it is baked or broiled.

To keep fish white when boiling, add 1 tablespoon lemon juice, and 1/4 teaspoon salt to one quart of water used for cooking.

When using canned fish such as salmon or tuna in a creamed or scalloped dish, sprinkle fish with lemon juice before adding the white sauce.

If fish is served as an appetizer course, lemon is indispensable. An excellent cocktail sauce for shellfish — oysters, clams or shrimp — is made with 1 tablespoon horseradish, 1/2 cup tomato catsup, 5 tablespoons fresh lemon juice, a dash of tabasco sauce and salt to taste. Blend ingredients well and serve very cold.

For a canape spread, cream 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice with 1/2 pound sweet butter. This is an excellent spread for crisp crackers or fresh or toasted bread to be topped with anchovies, caviar, sardines or spreads made with tuna, salmon or any desired fish. For lemon garnishes with fish, be sure to serve juice quarters so that the individual can add lemon to his taste.

Here is an excellent method of preparing a salmon mold, good for Lent and equally good at any season.

Salmon Mold

- 1 No. 3 can salmon
- 1/2 cup butter
- 1/2 cup cornstarch
- 1/2 cup dry mustard
- 1 egg yolk
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1/2 cup lemon juice
- 1/2 cup gelatin
- 2 tablespoons cold water
- Salt to taste
- 1/2 cup whipping cream
- 1/2 cup diced cucumber

Cook butter, cornstarch, mustard, egg yolk and milk in double boiler to soft custard consistency. Add gelatin dissolved in cold water. Add lemon juice and salmon. Season to taste. (Fish salmon through course sieve if a fine texture is desired.) Cool. Fold in whipped cream and cucumber. Four large omelette molds or a number of small molds. Serves 6. Serve garnished with lemon quarters, lemon slices and radish roses.

gravy from the fat left in the pan, stirring in two tablespoons of flour, one cup of milk or cream and the cup of stock made from the giblets. If you like, add a few button mushrooms. Serve the chicken with the gravy poured around it.

Reception Punch

- 8 cups sugar
- 2 quarts water
- 1/2 cup crushed mint leaves
- 3 quarts orange juice
- 1 quart pineapple, grape or berry juice
- 1 quart lemon juice
- 2 quarts iced tea
- 2 gallons water
- 2 quarts ginger ale
- Orange and lemon slices
- and mint sprigs

Boil sugar with 2 quarts water about 5 minutes. Add crushed mint. Cool and strain. Add fruit juices, tea and water. Just before serving add ginger ale. Pour over ice in punch bowls. Garnish with fruit slices and mint sprigs. Serves 100.

Lemon Hard Sauce

- 1-3 cup softened butter
- 1-3 cups powdered sugar
- 1 egg yolk
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- Cream together well. Fold in thoroughly 1 egg white, stiffly beaten. This makes a delicious cake icing also. Serves 8-10.

Cocktail Sauce for Shellfish

- 1 tablespoon horseradish
- 1/2 cup tomato catsup
- 5 tablespoons lemon juice
- Dash of tabasco sauce
- Salt to taste
- Blend well. Serve very cold. Serves 4.

Turkey Curry

- 6 tablespoons fat
- 1-3 cup onion, finely chopped
- 1 large apple, peeled, diced
- 1 large can mushrooms or 1 pound fresh mushrooms
- 3 cups turkey, diced
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 to 1 1/2 cups turkey stock and 1 to 1 1/2 cups milk or cream

Cook onion, apple, mushrooms and turkey in the fat until onion and apple begin to be transparent, 10 to 15 minutes. If fresh mushrooms are used sauté several minutes before adding to other ingredients. Remove from heat, add salt, flour and curried powder and stir thoroughly. Add liquid, and cook until thickened throughout. Set over hot water, cover and cook 15 minutes longer to blend the flavors. Taste and add more seasoning if desired. Serve with hot boiled rice. Little or no salt is added in cooking rice.

night.

Pete K. Parkhurst, S. Buhl, L. Fuller and H. Wiley, returned to barracks in Edmonton Sunday morning after a two weeks furlough.

A large number met the midnight train Saturday night to see Phil Stur-art and Ted Kowalchuk passing through on their way east to take up their duties in the Flying Corps.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Fish, Sr., who have been enjoying a visit from their daughter, returned with her to Hanna this week.

Quite a lot of excitement was provided south of Greenfield last week when some fox trappers established a camp in Bob Barnett's meadow and started trapping muskrats. They refused to leave when requested by the owners. The R.C.M.P. confiscated their traps and hides and fined them.

Dr. and Mrs. Springbett journeyed to Calgary to visit Mrs. Springbett's parents last week.

Mr. J. Nelson is home on leave from his duties with the navy this week.

Mr. Cliff Reynolds was a business tripper to the city for a few days last week.

Among those who went to the city last week were Mr. and Mrs. Sawara, Mrs. Louis and Jackie, Mr. A. Fenton,
Miss. Marion Lane, Miss. Annie Wiley
Mr. J. Grant, Mrs. Dahl, Miss. E.
Ware, Miss. Beale Bowerman, Miss
Morton, Mrs. W. Brunner and Mrs. R.
Snyder.

We inadvertently omitted to mention in the United Church W.A. story in our last issue that Mrs. Snyder and Mrs. Sorgen were hostesses.

Reynolds Garage is unloading a car load of new Dodge this week.

The St. Patrick's Tea was held in the Presbyterian Manse on Saturday, March 16th by the Ladies Guild. In spite of inclement weather many ladies braved the winds for a pleasant cup of tea.

Mrs. Freed and Mrs. K. Hutchinson, convener of the tea were assisted by other members of the Guild.

RED CROSS NOTES

Mr. Norman Somerville, K.C., at the Annual Meeting held recently in Edmonton, told his listeners of the manifold aspects of Red Cross activities—of comforts for the services, hospital and surgical supplies, ambulances, tracing of lost relatives, etc.
to bomb victims and refugees, hospitals, mobile dressing stations, blood donations, etc. Last Sunday night's program of "Carry on, Canada," on the C.B.C., gave confirmation of this glorious expression of Canada's determination to have a part in "freedom's crowning hour."

I quote this from Mr. Somerville's address:
"Hitler and the Germans have made one very serious blunder. They accepted the theory that the British Empire was like a pear tree, which, when the pears ripened and dropped off, would be naked and alone. But the emblem of England is not a pear tree, but an oak, and wherever the oak drops her acorns, there shall she reproduce in kind. The world today is learning to realize that when the torment was laid upon the mother oak in Britain, the echo of that storm was heard among the forests of young oaks around the Empire, and grew in volume as it circled the globe, coming back as a mighty voice saying with one accord to Hitler and all his crew: 'We shall stand firm behind the Motherland and see her through.'"

Now is the time to make good that pledge. The crisis nears, with the intensification of attacks on vessels, and bombings on Britain, and the consequent intensification of loss, suffering and need. British women, as well as men, are being conscripted for essential work. Shall we Canadian women, too, measure up and hear our part in the world's most crucial hour? Carry on, Wainwright!

The local Red Cross will serve lunch at the Isaac Leduc Sale on Wednesday, April 2nd.

The following donations are gratefully acknowledged:
Mayfield School, $2.60; Heath Young People's Group (concert and dance), $30.00; March 16th Sing-Song $9.00, less expenses. —H.M.W.

2nd DIAL REVIEW by Walter Dales

Spring fever is beginning to spread around these days, and pretty soon the annual epidemic will be in full swing. So here's a prescription for that restless feeling—just listen every day to the "Happy Gang" at 11:00 a.m. It's an old favorite, in fact it's almost an institution, but it's always refreshingly new and funny. The "Happy Gang" made its bow on June 14th, 1937, as a sustaining feature on C.B.L., Toronto. Bert Pearl, Kathleen Stokes, Blane Mathe
and Bob Farman, all charter members, loved doing the program because of its informal and impromptu quality.
It gave them a chance to be themselves on the air. And it's easy to see that they still have fun doing it.

Some facts about Bert Pearl. A westerner, born in Winnipeg in 1913; studied medicine at the U. of Manitoba until he abandoned it in 1932 to get into radio; went east in 1936 and made a hit in radio as singer, master of ceremonies and pianist; on the "Happy Gang" he works entirely without a script. Incidentally, girls, he's a bachelor.

The Edward G. Robinson (Big Town) family are all ping pong fans.
And what's more, Mrs. R. has a slight edge over Edward—he says she has more time to practice! Occasionally, too, many embarrass his father by administering him a sound beating at ping pong—always in the presence of guests, of course. Edward Robinson likes pattering around in the garden, also, and has more than once been mistaken for his own gardener. On one recent occasion he allowed a stranger who asked for "Mr. Robnson" to believe he was really the gardener. While the caller waited in the library, Robinson did a quick change into more respectable clothes and then re-appeared to the great embarrassment of the stranger who turned very red and stammered out his apologies. "Big Town" is heard over CJCA Wednesdays at 6:00 p.m.

Hard times on the London stage a few years ago were responsible for the birth of "Mr. Carp," the weird little English comic character you've been hearing on the Chase and Sanborn program via the vocal talents of Richard Haydn. Mr. Haydn had played straight and dramatic roles in England until cakes and coffee became harder and harder to finance.
So Mr. Carp made his bow to the British television audience in 1935 and was an immediate hit. He became so popular that the young actor was invited to perform at a private gathering before the present King and Queen. Noel Coward brought Haydn to the States in 1938, and Rudy Vallee introduced him to the American radio audience in 1939. He has been going places ever since, and has been signed up for several more guest appearances on Charlie McCarthy's program, which you all listen to at 6:00 p.m., Sundays.

Don Wilson, announcer for Jack Benny's program, has the perfect answer to the transportation problem.
When Benny broadcasts from Palm Springs, Wilson went along for a week's vacation, and took two of his horses in a trailer behind the car.
Wilson was caught in a sudden desert rainstorm and his car became stuck in the mud. He promptly released his horses from the trailer and hitched them to the front bumper, pulled the car out of the mud and was on his way again. Now Benny is thinking of carrying a burro in the back seat of the old Maxwell. It's an idea for anyone who has to do country driving, (or even city driving) in Alberta, especially at this time of year.
